2009 DECANTER WORLD WINE AWARDS

The 2009 Decanter World Wine Awards attracted more entries this year than any other wine competition in the world, cementing its position as the world's biggest wine competition. In total 10,285 wines were entered, more than double the amount when the competition launched six years ago. The number of companies submitting wines increased by 23% to 2,240.

Decanter World Wine Awards Chairman Steven Spurrier said 'winning a silver medal in the Decanter World Wine Awards is the equivalent of winning a gold from other competitions. Our prestige goes before us.'

While terroir is celebrated, the consumer is paramount. As the world's biggest and most respected wine media brand, Decanter manages to reach over 5 million consumers. 'Today's wine consumer has a genuine need for advice and guidance in choosing wine from the vast range on offer from all over the world,' said Michael Hill Smith MW, Regional Chair for Australia. 'Consumers trust Decanter, and it is this trust that underpins the continued success of the Decanter World Wine Awards'.
